Declines in the Ruling Quotation on Crude Oil Continues and Among the Producers

THERE IS CONSTERNATION.

A General Demand That the Price of Oil Well Supplies be Reduced-Field Developments

As predicted in last week's review ther three cents, making the price of Pennsylvania crude $1.28. At this rate it will not be long before the doljar point is reached. The question is now being asked how far below the representative has taken the pains to drill. Some of them who had ing a large amount of work, have entirely stopped operations and will do

There is searcely anything doing on savior and benefactor. the floor of the exchange and but very wlots of oil changes hands. The Sugar Lake pool in Venango county, Jackson counship, has seen its best days and is now surrounded by dry holes. Shearley & Co.'s dry hole completed yesterday, cuts off the last hope of finding an outlet to the field. There are a few inside ocations yet to drill, and when this is done it will end further operations in Sugar Lake pool.

"Whither are we drifting" is the remark, heard on all sides among the producing element of the petroleum wearnity The rapid downward course of the market for crude has created a facting of consternation, and the bright and prosperous outlook, and promises given by the general situation when the new year was ushered in has been transformed to darkness, and a hopeless, foreboding future.

High Prices for Supplies.

The most perplexing question which now confronts the producer is the unwarranted high prices demanded for off well supplies and machinery. Especially is this so with the small producer, who can see no profit in operating their light calibre territory at the present figure paid for crude. They have petitioned in vain, the dealers to reduce their rates, but they say in return the manufacturers are all members of the trust and refuse to concede an inch of the stand they have taken, and therefore cannot help the producer in the least. It is thought, however, that such a pressure is being brought to bear upon the manufacturers, to reduce the present high price, that they will soon yield to the producer's just demands. A committee appointed by the fraternity to look up the "iron" question report that owing to the high prices prevailing, business in general is being effected, and that not only is the producer compelled to shut down drill, but building and many new enterprises have been forced to a standstill. They also find in their inves-tigation that the pig iron market is almost stagnant, and but comparatively few sales are reported. In short, they assert that unless the manufacturers reduce present schedules, that not only will the great petroleum industry be paralyzed, but nearly every other branch of business and enterprise be crippled, in which fron is a principal factor. The producers hope, from the force of circumstances, that at no distant day, the manufacturers will find out that they must adopt prices to conform with the growing stringent times, or that their sales will not justify them in running their works, or if they do, the market will be overstocked with production. The small producer cannot see a ray of hope for the betterment of their condition, only in the reduction of high prices by the manufacturers, as the pleaginous situation wed from almost every standpoint presents a decidedly bearish aspect.

They fully realize that the recent development of prolific territory in the southwest district cannot do otherwise, but result in augmenting production and piling up of stocks, and the falling off of our export trade, all of which naturally tends to a still lower market the western fields of Ohlo and Indiana, and if anything, the general aspect is ess encouraging. Production here, as the regions producing Pennsylvania oil, is increasing, and the stocks growng larger, although the demand for the Trenton rock product, owing to its cheapness, which enables the shipper to more successfully compete with the inferior grades of foreign oils, materwing the outlook from the present situation, there is no one engaged in the business, and who is thoroughly conversant with conditions and the crude market must, and will go much lower before bottom prices are reach-In the face of these indisputable and uncontrollable conditions, there is ight territory, and that is to hang up the drill until more opportune times are sented, and leave the field of acon to the rich corporations and comanies, and those who are the fortuate possessors of prolific territory.

To Oppose the Standard.

Since last week's review important events have transpired, in which the producers are particularly interested and concerned. Notably among the new things that have happened, is the merging of all the independent interests in the regions producing Pennsylvania oil into one corporation. These interests embrace the United States Tipe Line Company, the Pure Oil Company, and all the so-called independent refiners, the independent producing companies, and the individual producers, whose predelictions towards in-dependent supremacy have never been mistaken since the inauguration of the Pure Oil Company last week, associated with them, all the above independent interests, and increased their exp-Ital stock from $1,000,000 to $19,000,000 It is said that the new corporation will assume the character of a trust, al-though this imputation has been strenupusly denied by its most prominent new corporation contemplates many their facilities for doing business, and rendering their patrons the best of service. The pipe line department will so it is said, widen its field of action and extend its lines into many important southwest pools and compete for the results of the new concern is being, at the nose all the time. I was advised again. I am now able to assist with my closely watched by the producer, who wonders if this competition will give Some are inclined to think it will, and the market has been marked down an- that they will be benefited, while others just as noble in the producing business view with suspicion, the independent movement, and say the consolidations of independent interests is only a trust with another name, and that they will, dollar mark will the market go. Your as all trusts do, look particularly after ew a number of producers and progresses, the producer will keep a soon find out whether its character is simon pure or otherwise. out to be true blue, as it is claimed, and raises the price of oil, its com re drilling until the market for will be hailed with delight, and the poor producer will regard it as their week present a very interesting study for the producer. There were con pleted, an unusually large number good wells, which are not confined to any particular locality, but distributed throughout every section of the pro-ducing regions. A remarkable feature to be noted in the southwest district i production of the Kanawha and South Penn Oil Companies' Gordon sand wel's located on the Big Mills tract in Wetze county, W. Va. There are six or sever wells in this pool, making a daily pro duction of between 1,400 and 1,500 barrels, and which has been maintaine for some time. The indications all point to a prolific field of considerable extent, and if these rich companies the case in most other sections, it would be but a short time until this field along would not only increase the production peyond the limits of consumption but maintain for an indefinite time, a remarkable large daily average drill has demonstrated the fact that the Big Mills section of the country abounds in prolific territory, and that there remains yet enough territory to the trade alone for many months.

And so is this the case in the Campcell's Run district. Here, blg wells are the rule, while their staying qualities are all that could be hoped for. Run, too, is a material contributor in maintaining a big production of Gordon sand oil, and there are also hundreds o cres to drill, which may be reasonably counted upon to give forth a large pro duction. When the Gordon sand terri-tory of West Virginia is sized up, it is found there is a sufficient amount of good territory still left to drill to main tain the present large production for a long time if the possessors of the dig ging should rush the drill.

The Stringtown Pool.

The Big Injun sand developments ad acent to the Stringtown pool is an other important factor in holding up the large production. In the past thre or four weeks the producing area has peen widened, and everything points to ... increasing production. n comparatively new territory, the South Penn Oil Company added several fine Hig Injun sand producers to their ompleted list, and have several mor new ventures that will soon be in and which look like winners Notwithstand one been set forth in Lewis county, W. Va., in the vicinity of Weston, drill up to date has recorded nothing of special importance. Since the opening up of spring, there has not been fewer han a dozen experimental wells drilled, with a view of developing a new pool of importance, but all of them proved failures, and the theoretical and renetical failed to connect. It was in nost successful and practical operators had pinned much faith in the territory and the development of the prolifi-Wells were located upon the old northeast and southwest belt theory, and when this falled, the cross belt argument was tried with the same cesult. The flash in the pan well, located upon the Camden tract, and drilled in a ong while ago by the Southern Oil Company, led to all this experimental work, and it has made many wide awake producers squander a number of fortunes. And these same old operators have not yet given up their fondest tope of striking it rich in Lewis county, and are trying just as hard as ever find the coveted prize.

Col. Guffey's Wildcatting. Perhaps the greatest enthusiast on he future of the territory in the vicinty of Weston, is Hon. J. M. Guffey, whose experimental work there has cos him a "mint of money," so to speak. This enterprising and venturesome This wildcatter this week completed anothe important well, located upon the Mi hael Simins farm, on West Fork river, west from the town of Weston. This mportant and interesting venture was drilled to a depth of almost 2,700 feet, which is below the fifth sand horizon. The well was dry in all formation, fact, some of the formations were missing altogether. The Southern Oil Com pany, too, this week met their Waterlo n Lewis county, in a venture located on the S. D. Camden tract, just west of the fown of Weston, and seven or eight hundred feet west from their No. 4 and from 1 100 to 1 200 feet in the same diection from the Stiles Brothers' Tayor farm producer. The Southern people were hunting for results in the salt sand, but their failure in this fornation will not daunt them from further search in the lower strata.

The record in defined territory the good: the producers ranging in production from fifty to one hundred and forty barrels a day on the start-off. The experimental drill, however, in search for new territory was a decided failure and the effort to extend the producing boundaries is still as futile as ever. The Southern Oil Company for some time has been working to extend the producing lines of the north east extension, but instead of accomter located upon the Taylor Ward pro-
